Hi Melissa,

I have a spill from 5/5/12 for Dakota Plains in New Town. While researching, Donna and I noticed two tanks, so we checked the oil database and discovered that the EPA did an SPCC inspection on 7/24/12, shortly after the spill, and they weren't in compliance. They submitted an FRP on 12/23/13, and there were deficiencies. Two extensions were granted. On 10/16/14 a GIUE was done, and they passed. All letters that have been sent have been returned undeliverable. The last note in the database is from 1/28/15 that a letter was returned but no information that another letter was sent, and they appear to be still out of compliance. Can you please let me know where we stand with this facility? I'm looking into possibly sending a 308 information request. Thanks!

OK this is what we have to date:

They received our letter outlining FRP Plan Review deficiencies in September and submitted a response via email which is in line for review.

The GIUE Letter was returned to us twice, we resent it and they finally received a copy on February 10, 2015.

I apologize that the Oil Database wasn't updated with that information. Barb went in and made the corrections for future reference.

If I can be of any assistance for your 308 or possible enforcement action please let me know.

Some of the information you are looking for may be in their FRP?

Hope this helps

Hey Darla – yes this is a facility we have history with ;o)

When we did the first SPCC inspection it was called New Town Transfer station and was a (100 % Transloading Facility) A lot of history there which Donna may be able to shed some light.

Then they expanded and installed the large tanks, so jurisdiction was clear and we moved forward with the FRP Inspection/GIUE.

Everything we have sent has been returned – I called to ask for a correct mailing address and was told post office will not deliver there so we need to send them via fed ex.

Let me follow up with Barb to see what the status is on our re-mailing efforts ;o)

Standby.....
